Charlie Gray Makes Run for State Central Committee

Defiance County Executive Committee Vice-Chair Charlie Gray is a candidate for the 1st District State Senate Central Committee seat. Charlie says, "It is time this district had someone who is not afraid to speak out and stand up for the voters." Charlie has the experience to benefit us all. He has been involved in active politics since 1968 when he worked on the Humphrey campaign. In 1972 he became a Committeeman in Defiance County and has held many positions over the years including Central Committee Chair. Currently he is Vice Chair of the executive committee, co-chair of Defiance County Victory Squad Campaign Committee, President of USW Local 1-701, and delegate to the Williams County Labor Council. Charlie has worked on over 100 campaigns through the years and has been in charge of over 40 state and national campaigns in Defiance County with more than a dozen being district wide or multi-county. He is a past member of the Board of Elections, a former local, state and national officer of the Young Democrats of America, and active in his union since 1974.

Defiance County Democratic Party, Williams County Labor Council, and USW Local 1-701 have all given their endorsements to Charles Gray in his bid for State Central committeeman 1st State Senate District. Service in all his political and union activities gives Charles Gray the experience and wisdom to serve the voters. His strong union and political roots makes him an ideal candidate. Please vote for Charles Gray this May 2nd primary.

Dem State Doin's

For the first time in a long time we have several statewide contested primaries. The slate of candidates is one of the most qualified and dedicated we have ever seen. As many of our readers may not have had the opportunity to research the candidates we are providing small bios on all of the candidates that have contested primaries statewide. After the primary we will have articles on all of our candidates including: Jennifer Brunson-Secretary of State; Sherrod Brown-US Senate; Barbara Sykes-Auditor; Ben Nierberg-State Senate; Ben McCullough-State Representative and Angie Byrns-State Representative.

Governor

Bryan Flannery is graduate of Cleveland St. Edward High School and the University of Notre Dame, where he was a member of the University's football team as a three year starter and member of the 1988 National Championship Team.

Bryan later served as a Lakewood City Councilman and a two-term State Representative. He was the Democratic Party nominee for Secretary of State in 2002.

Bryan has served on numerous financial committees at both levels of government. Bryan has also crafted a constitutional amendment to place on the ballot concerning Ohio's funding for education. This issue along with creating new technology jobs, especially alternate energy, has been a benchmark for his campaign. For more information on Bryan and his running mate Frank Starrs visit their website at www.flanneryforgovernor.org.

Ted Strickland attended Asbury College in Kentucky, receiving a B.A. in History in 1963. He went on to attend the Asbury Theological Seminary and received a Master of Divinity. He continued his studies at the University of Kentucky, receiving a doctoral degree in Counseling Psychology in 1980. Professionally, Ted has served as a minister, a psychologist, and a college professor.

In 1992, he was elected to Congress. After narrowly losing his congressional seat in 1994, he was once again elected to the 6th Congressional District in 1996. He has represented the district in Congress ever since. During his last five terms in Congress, Tod served on the House Energy and Commerce Committee, the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs and is the ranking Democrat on its Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations. Tod is promoting his Turnaround Ohio plan. For more information on Tod and his running mate former Attorney General Lee Fisher visit <http://todrickland.com/>.

Attorney General

Subodh Chandra is a graduate of the Yale Law School, where he was executive editor of the Yale Law & Policy Review. He also graduated with honors and distinction from Stanford University.

Chandra just completed service as Director of Law of the City of Cleveland. Chandra led the work of an 82-lawyer department and served as acting mayor in the mayor's absence. Under Chandra's leadership, Cleveland moved vigorously through in-house investigations to clean up corruption, including bribery schemes involving city inspectors and purchasing officials. With a relentless focus on excellence and accountability, Chandra restored the reputation of the department, something he intends to continue as Attorney General. Previously, as federal prosecutor, Chandra successfully fought health-care fraud and corruption—winning recognition from FBI director Robert Mueller. For more information on Subodh visit www.chandraforohio.com.

Marc Dunn is a native of Cleveland, Ohio. Senator Marc Dunn is a 1984 graduate of the University of Michigan, where he earned a Bachelors degree in History. He graduated from the Case Western Reserve University School of Law in 1987. Marc has served on the Liberty Township Board of Education from 2001-2002 and has been a Senate member since January 2001. Senator Dunn serves on several committees.

His fight against corruption and the special interests that fuel and fund it didn't begin with Coingate—the myriad scandals that have cost Ohio taxpayers and businesses hundreds of millions of dollars. He began his efforts to clean up Ohio politics by introducing legislation that will bring transparency and accountability to campaign fundraising and reduce the influence of the big money donors who have too much control over our state. Visit Marc's website for more information at <http://dunnforohio.com>.

State Treasurer

Rich Cordray having been elected twice the Franklin County Treasurer, Rich collects $1.3 billion in property taxes annually and manages an investment portfolio averaging $500 million for the only Ohio county with an AAA bond rating. Rich is also President of the Board of Revision and Chairman of the Budget Commission.

Cordray has served as a State Representative and as Ohio's first State Solicitor. An attorney by profession, he argued six cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and taught for 15 years at Ohio State's law school. Among Cordray's achievements are City and County magazine's nationwide County Leader of the Year Award and a five time champion on Jopardy!. For more information on Rich visit his website at www.cordraycommittee.com/.

Hugh Quill is a graduate of the University of Dayton. Hugh has served the people of Montgomery County as Treasurer since 1993. As Treasurer, Hugh Quill has developed a reputation for creativity in collection of tax revenue from 240,000 tax parcels in Montgomery County. Mr. Quill oversees a $400 million investment portfolio and has safely generated over $236 million in investment income, an average of nearly $24 million a year.

Understanding the need for economic growth in Montgomery County, Mr. Quill initiated a program in conjunction with the Montgomery County Community and Economic Development Department to offer an innovative economic development tool called Linked Deposit, a $20 million program that buys down interest rates on projects that generate quality jobs, increases in property values and tax collections. Since launching this progressive program in 1999, over $26 million in loans have been approved, 1,200 quality jobs have been created or retained and 470 housing units have been developed or rehabilitated. Visit Hugh's website at www.hughquill.com/.

Supreme Court Justice Jan. 1 term

William O'Neill graduated from Ohio University in 1969 and Cleveland Marshall College of Law in 1979. From 1984 until 1996, Judge O'Neill was an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Ohio where he represented the Ohio Civil Rights Commission and the Industrial Commission of Ohio. O'Neill was first elected to the 11th District Court of Appeals in 1996 using his trademark slogan "Money and Judges Don't Mix". His opponent ousting him by a margin of 10 to 1, yet the O'Neill "money and fairness" message carried the day. Judge O'Neill was re-elected in 2002. He was the Democratic nominee for the Supreme Court of Ohio in 2004.

Judge O'Neill is a Vietnam Veteran and has been awarded the Bronze Star. He retired from the Ohio National Guard with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel and is a Registered Nurse. He works on-call in the Pediatric Emergency Department of Hillcrest Hospital. For more information on Judge O'Neil visit www.ohiojudges.org/candidates/oneill.htm.

AJ Wagner served as a Probate Court Referee in 1981 and in 1987, became an

Acting Judge for Dayton Municipal Court. From 1991-1999, Wagner was elected Montgomery County Auditor and left the office to pursue a position on the Common Pleas Bench. In 2000, Wagner was elected Common Pleas Court Judge where he continues to serve. Judge Wagner is a published author of four children's books, one of which is used throughout the U.S. as a guide for character education. The proceeds from all sales have been used to benefit various family charities.

Regarding his candidacy Judge Wagner has said, "It is not ambition that motivates me, it is duty. Duty calls, and I must answer that call by running for the Ohio Supreme Court. My top priority will remain as it has been for over 25 years as a teacher, lawyer, auditor, and judge: to seek justice for the children and families of Ohio." Judge Wagner's website is at www.wagnerforjustice.org/.

Supreme Court Justice Jan. 2 term

Ben Eppy is a practicing attorney with 38 years of legal experience and service as an Assistant Ohio Attorney General, Air Force lawyer, Ohio state senator, city council member, and community leader. In the Ohio Attorney General's office he prosecuted organized crime as Chief of the Division of Criminal Activities, and served as Deputy Chief of the Civil Rights Division. Eppy has participated in hundreds of trials and has practiced before the Ohio Supreme Court. He was the first African-American to be the top leader of one of the Ohio General Assembly's four legislative caucuses.

Eppy is a Columbus attorney, is the only African-American among candidates in either party for the two seats up this year on the currently all-white court. "What is more important is the philosophy of the court," Mr. Eppy said. "I believe the philosophy should be different than what the court has now."

Peter M. Sikora has served as Judge of the Cuyahoga County Court of Common Pleas, Juvenile Division, since 1989. In 2002, he was elected to the Board of Directors of the Ohio Association of Juvenile and Family Court Judges and in 2005 as Secretary of the Association.

Judge Sikora is widely recognized as an innovative jurist for his creative sentencing and emphasis on restorative justice. He is a frequent lecturer and author on legal issues. The Judge is a member of numerous Boards and has received many awards and recognitions, including the Citizen of Distinction Award from Goodwill Industries of Greater Cleveland, Inc., and induction into the National Hall of Fame for Persons with Disabilities.

In 1996, Judge Sikora was the Democratic nominee for Justice of the Supreme Court of Ohio. His campaign focused on the need for campaign finance reform and restoration of confidence in the judicial process.

President's Message

Welcome to the first edition of Dem Doin's a monthly newsletter of the Democratic Leadership Alliance of Defiance County. The enclosed letter and membership form will give you the details of our newly formed group so I won't spend time in this article going over our founding principles. But that does presume you will read the material attached. In this first article I want to set a tone that is to be the cornerstone of DLA.

Our times together, however they evolve over the years, are to be about inspiration and involvement. Few have time to spend at business meetings, policy working, and long terms in office. Our group wants to leave those things to those who love doing them and are gifted at them. We want the DLA to be about making a home for those who have a talent to contribute in short spurts, or want to discuss important issues, or raise dollars for favorite candidates/causes, or have some family fun. Politics shouldn't be about drudgery, it should be about the recognition that together we can do more than we can do apart.

As a young boy I remember the excitement our family felt when my grandmother, Mary Ann Plant, of Akron Ohio, received one of those special calls from President elect Kennedy personally thanking her for her support in his recent defeat of Richard Nixon. Those were heady times. I am newly involved in our Democratic Party as a committeeman and agreed to take on this role in the DLA because I believe that there is someone in Defiance County today that will receive a similar kind of call from a future president that will mark the turning point in our country returning to Democratic ideals.

DLA only needs one thing, YOU. It needs your willingness to step up to the plate during this important time of trying to bring Democratic Ideals back to the forefront of American politics. It needs your financial commitment to support local candidates and push issues that are at the heart of Democratic Ideals. It needs your time where you feel it can best be used. It needs your eyes and ears in the community to figure out how best promote Democratic Ideals. It needs your hands and feet to reach others for the sake of Democratic Ideals. It needs your laughter and brains to find ways to reach into the independents of our community.

Our first event will be April 22nd, at noon. Cost is $6.00 and we will talk over lunch about a critical economic issue, low wages. We will talk of future gatherings (see Dem "Local" Doins' article) and of growing our Association. All are welcome whether members or not. All who join get a vote. All who come get a voice.

Remember, together, we can do more than we can do apart. Let's bring Democratic Ideals back into play in Defiance County, Ohio, and Nationally. Fill out the enclosed membership form (even if you can't join just yet) so we can have contact information and return it to the address listed.

Blessings and Peace,
Dave Plant.

To Reframe National Security, Democrats Must First See How 'Message' And 'Frame' Are Different

by Jeffrey Feldman

When progressives talk about "reframing" the political debate, we often confuse 'frame' with 'message.' We want reframing to be a quick path to victory, a magic bullet delivered in the form of a perfect talking point, that brings the opposition to its knees.

In fact, framing is not a magic bullet, but a set of tools that empowers progressives to take control of the debate—first by seeing the broad ideas that trap us in a losing position, and then by re-framing the issues in moral terms that speak to ideals of the American people.

A key area where the Democrats need to use framing is national security.

'War on Terror'

Despite the growing pile of scandals, Republicans still control the debate on national security with one phrase: War on Terror.

'War on Terror' is more than just a phrase. It is a carefully constructed concept—a set of magic words—created by highly-paid consultants to help the Republicans claim the mantle of national security. If the President describes the War in Iraq as part of the 'War on Terror,' for example, he can accuse anyone who does not support his war of not wanting to fight the people who attacked us on 9/11. And that is exactly what he does.

The phrase 'War on Terror' should be avoided in debate because it traps Democrats in this simple metaphor's logic:

[terrorism] is [an enemy army]

But what is 'terrorism' really? It is a tool used by enemies—a method—but it is not an enemy itself.

We can no more fight a war against 'terrorism' than we can fight a war against the evil in men's hearts. But we never get to those ideas when we are constantly forced to defend ourselves against charges that we are 'weak' in the 'war on terror.'

Re-framing: Guard the Gates

So how do we get out of this trap? How do we re-frame the debate on national security?

The answer to this question has been difficult to see—until recently. The so-called UAE port deal scandal, however, revealed to the nation exactly how President Bush's 'War on Terror' was so radically different from the understanding of national security held by most Americans.

When the port scandal broke, most Americans were shocked to learn that these vital entries into our country were being turned over—whether in part or in full—to a foreign country. While accused of being racist for this reaction, in fact the concern over the ports is founded in a very basic idea. The protect the country from those who seek to harm us, we must prevent those people from gaining access. To do that, we must guard the gates.

Think about this for a moment. After America learned that the country had just been attacked by ordinary looking men who boarded planes with coach-class tickets and carry-on luggage—what was our major concern as a nation? We were afraid that more terrorists would board the planes. And so, to protect the country, we created a massive security system to guard the gates at our airports.

Imagine if we were to suddenly discover that the agency responsible for airport gate security was owned in full or in part by a foreign country, running that service for profit? We would be outraged because we would suddenly wonder if the gates were really guarded.

Long before the UAE port scandal, Americans believed that to guard this country we must prevent bad people and dangerous materials from getting through the gates. And when we saw the port scandal unfold, we saw that President Bush had not only left the gates unguarded, but he had sold the keys. The phrase 'guarding the gates' is a progressive idea that re-frames the debate on national security. It is not the final message, but offers a broad logic for understanding how Democrats can once and for all take back the debate on this crucial issue.

But the issue does not stop there.

Iraq and 9/11, But Also Katrina

For when we talk about re-framing the debate, we need to think big. When we begin to repeat the idea of 'guarding the gates' as the key to national security, we see how President Bush has not only weakened national security, but also compromised national safety.

The lack of vigilance and concern by President Bush in the days leading up to Hurricane Katrina speaks to a broader problem that we begin to see when we talk about the importance of 'guarding the gates' to the well-being of America.

President Bush watched as Katrina, literally, slowly headed for a full on attack of our nation's unguarded shores. He watched and he listened, but as the videotape shows, he did not stand up and insist on doing everything possible to 'guard the gates' of our country from this threat.

Obviously, a terrorist attack and a hurricane are two very different things. But to take control of the debate on national security, Democrats must see national security--and talk about it--in much broader terms than just the war on Iraq.

A newly framed Democratic version of national security would sound something like this:

There is a fundamental split between the Republican and the Democratic vision of national security. Republicans insist that the key to national defense is to fight a war on foreign soil, and they tell us that this will prevent terrorists from gaining access to our country. But even as they fight a foreign war, they leave the gates to our country unguarded. Democrats believe that national security begins with guarding the gates at home, and building strong alliances abroad.

We see every port, every border and every airport as an opportunity to strengthen our security and guard Americans from those who seek to attack us. And security goes hand in hand with safety. Guarding our shores from hurricanes is just as important as guarding our ports from attacks. For Democrats, safety and security begins with guarding the gates.

That is what it looks like to be in a new frame--to speak about national security in terms that are completely separate from the 'war on terror' and in terms that give Democrats the upper hand.

Putting It To Use

To understand how to put the 'guard the gates' frame to use, it is critical for Democrats to start seeing political debate in terms of different core situations. Not all debate is the same. There are different situations that involve different people and have different outcomes.

Situation 1: Grassroots Activism

To use this new frame in grassroots work, try creating a basic 'I believe' statement that can be repeated quickly and with conviction:

Democrats believe that safety and security begins by guarding the gates.

This phrase can be used when people ask what the Democrats stand for, when recruiting people to vote for Democratic candidates, when working on a phone bank, and when training new volunteers. The power of the "I believe" formula (also called an Elevator Speech) is that it presents your big ideas quickly. After that, the discussion on terrorism and the military will be on Democratic terms. And grassroots activists should push to talk about national security and national safety together. "Democrats believe in well-guarded ports and having a plan before the next natural disaster hits our shores."

Situation 2: Individual Citizens, Dinner Table Debates

At the dinner table with a Republican cousin or sister, be careful not to let your anger get the best of you. Anger can be intimidating, but it does not reframe a debate. When someone confronts you with the accusation, "...yeah, but Democrats are weak on defense," remember that the Democratic frame is designed to take control of this entire issue--not to refute it point by point.

Try saying this at the table:

Look, I hear what you are saying, but I believe that safety and security begin with guarding America's gates. Democrats want to take every point of access to this country, every port--and every border--and we want to make sure we are prepared for whatever comes our way, whether that is a group of terrorists or the largest hurricane in history.

I believe that safety and security begins with guarding the gates.

Then help yourself to another helping of turkey and mashed potatoes. So long as you do not raise your voice, but listen to what your Republican family members say, and respond with a clear frame, you will not lose the debate. You may hit a stalemate, but you will not lose. And remember, the people listening to the debate--the other people at the table who are not talking--are often the ones we persuade, even if the debate ends in a stalemate.

Remember, the messages that work best are developed by our own attempts to apply the frame. It is always best not to confuse the 'frame' with the many different 'messages' or talking points we produce from that frame. A solid Democratic frame will give rise to many great phrases that invoke it. When you find one that works, run with it.

The key is never to let the opposition set the terms.

Dam Opinionated Doin's

By Tim Holtsberry

In this portion of the newsletter we will have a regular opinion column entitled From Where I Stand written mostly by me, but we anticipate having guest articles, and letters or other opinion articles submitted by our readership. We ask that you try to limit your submissions to 250 words or less as we would like to include as many articles as possible.

In my column I plan write some informational and historical articles about politics and government, to tackle some controversial issues, to try to stir you into action and sometimes just to entertain you, but I plan never to bore you. And I hope if you have a point-of-view that is a little different than mine, that you will jot your thoughts down and we can use them on this page. I have always thought that the more ideas exchanged allows us to reach a broader consensus on issues and problems.

In this issue I just want to briefly discuss the upcoming election. It's been said that complete power corrupts completely and absolute power corrupts absolutely. True words have never been spoken as evidenced by the more than a decade-old one-party Republican rule in the state of Ohio and the past five years of Republican rule of our national government. The Republican officials are so brazen that even when their hand is caught in the cookie jar, they just spin a lie and keep telling it until it sounds like the truth. We Democrats have stood on the sidelines too long and allowed the lies and corruption to continue without challenging it outright. So if you are ever going to get involved in the political process this is your year to join in. No more complaining and whining, get busy, that is why we have initiated this alliance to inspire and reinvigorate Democrats into action, so I implore you, let's turn the tide this year by working to elect Democrats.

State of Ohio Minimum Wage

Petitions to put the issue of increasing Ohio's minimum wage to $6.85 on the November ballot are currently being circulated by Ohioans for a Fair Minimum Wage. Once enacted, the state's minimum wage would then be tied to the inflation rate. Ohio's minimum wage was set back in 1990 at $4.25/hour and not been changed since. Only Ohio and Kansas have a lower minimum wage than the federal minimum of $5.15/hour

Fellow Democrats

Through the suggestion of some local party leaders and leaders at the state level, we have formed The Democratic Leadership Alliance of Defiance County. It is this group's intent to raise money, raise awareness and raise the participation level for all things Democratic in Defiance County. The group will enhance the efforts of the Defiance County Democratic Executive and Central Committees by utilizing all of our resources to promote Democratic ideals, candidates and issues.

This group has become necessary because of campaign finance and other laws that have been passed by our Republican-controlled government adversely affecting the participation of local parties and the unions in the political process. This group is not a political party, it is an association or club and members will not be handicapped by the laws intended to hinder Democratic ideals.

We plan to have monthly meetings with a program format that will present some issue or aspect of Democratic ideals. Our plans are to make these meetings fun, interesting and informative. We will often have guests and speakers who will explore issues that directly affect us or how we promote our ideals, candidates and issues.

There is a plan to publish a monthly newsletter to help keep Democrats informed about things that our Republican newspaper tends to ignore. There will be local, state and national stories that have gone without any coverage because the Republicans want to keep voting public uninformed. We will also have profiles on local candidates, elected officials and party leadership. Our intention is to also have entertaining things like the crossword puzzle, political cartoons and funny pictures and anecdotes.

We plan to have drawings, included a one for a vacation to San Juan, Puerto Rico, based upon your membership to the club. Events are being planned that the whole family can attend, so that we can have a time to fellowship together, while promoting the Democratic ideals.

Finally we know that making this all happen is going to take some participation on the part of many Democrats and Independents. We are not looking to overburden anyone. We want you to share your spare time, talent or treasure to help Democrats regain a position of prominence at the local, state and national levels. Whatever you can do help will be appreciated but most of all we need you to become a member so that we can ensure that you are getting the information and help you need to promote the Democratic ideals. Please read the attached membership form and if you have any questions contact one of the group's officers. This is an important step if we intend to put our party back in power and God knows we need to.

Democratically Yours,
